THE INTERNATIONAL BOAT RACE. This is the day fixed for the boat race between Oxford and Harvard, which event has been looked forward to with interest on both sides of the Atlantic for some weeks past. Our American crew labors under a great many disadvantages, but their friends are hopeful. Up to this time they have had to yield every disputed point in favor of their adversaries or give up all idea of a match at all. Thus in the very start they had to consent to carry a coxswain, abandoning the main feature of the style of rowing to which they have always been accustomed, and next they were not allowed to name the water on which they would race, but the Oxford crew refused to row anywhere except over the course with which they were entirely familiar. The course from Putney to Mortlake has been rowed over in racing matches between Oxford and Cambridge twenty times in the last quarter of a century, and in only six of those races has Oxford failed to their flesh and falling back on beef, mutton, win. The best time ever made by Cambridge in a winning race was in 1846 (21m. 5s.), but in course in 20 minutes last year, and in 20m. 6 4's this year. Cambridge has won (in 1856) in as slow time as 25% minutes, and Oxford (in 1854) in a second less than that. The weather makes a great difference; and it does not appear that the speed of races has increased materially within twenty-five years; the time of the two last years being apparently exceptional. The Harvard crew, in one of its trial pulls, has already come up to the Cambridge time of 1946, which only twice been exceeded by Oxford.

The changes we have mentioned forced the with them, and to have a boat built for the race, to meet the conditions imposed upon them. The new boat has only just been finished and they have not had the advantage of practising with it. If they can beat the Oxford in spite of all this, they will effect as complete a revolution in English rowing as was brought about in English yachting by the triumph of the America; for the superiority of the American stroke, over the long sweep of the British will be proved beyond question. It is, in fact, a contest of principles and not men. The Harvard stroke is not short and quick as is generally supposed. What the English papers call the "soldier like movement" of the Harvard crew, and the New York Herald calls their "nervous stroke," doubtless refers to the remarkable quickness of their recovery. It is clear enough that all the time the oar is out of water is time wasted, as far as the propulsion of the boat goes. The rule at Harvard is to reach forward as far as possible, cover the blade of the oar by placing it in the water at right angles, take hold hard at the beginning by kicking with the legs and by throwing the weight of the body on the beginning of the stroke. The main work is done with the legs and back, the arms not being used until the body reaches the perpendicular, when they are employed to feather the oar and finish the stroke. The arms are kept straight until the body reaches the perpendicular, the hardest of the pulling being at the beginning of the stroke by the legs and back.

The crews consist of the following oarsmen: Oxford crew-1. F. Willan, Exeter; 2. A. C. Yarborough, Lincoln; 3. J. C. Tinne, Univer- the United States. sity; S. D. Darbishire, Ballio!, (stroke); J. H. Hall. Corpus, (coxswain). Harvard crew-1. J. S. Fay, Boston; 2. F. O. Lyman, Hawaiian Island; J. W. H. Simmons, Concord; A. P. Loring, Boston, (stroke); A. Burnham, (coxswain).

It is a good choice that the crews have made of Mr. Thomas Hughes, (Tom Brown.) as referee. Mr. Hughes is an old Oxford rowingman at home in a boat, and as incapable of permitting foul-play in others as of playing foul bimself. There seems to have been a little trouble about the referee, and Oxford wanted to change, but Harvard very properly sticks to Mr. Hughes. In consequence of this Mr. Chitty refuses to act as umpire, not being willing to serve under Hughes, and the probability is that there will be no umpires at all, but Hughes will be selected as sole referee. This is the best arrangement, by all odds, that could be made.

It the Americans should run the Oxford as close as is expected, it will put what is called "English fair play" to a pretty severe test, and it remains to be seen how they will stand the ordeal. The British have treated their visitors with great courtesy so far, but have stood out for their "pound of flesh" on every contested point regarding the race. We mention these matters now, because all our grumbling should be done before the race, and if the Harvard's are defeated, let us remember that they conceded every point to the Englishman, rowing on his chosen course in his chosen style, and if they don't complain beforehand, they have no right to complain afterwards. If they should win, their victory will be all the greater for these disadvantages.

The St. Louis movement for a removal of the seat of government hardly meets with any response from other quarters of the country, and would probably die of inanition if the newspapers in Washington, and their "learned" correspondents, would let it alone. The dissertations of some of these recondite "constitutional lawyers," about the District of Columq:8, as it was, and as it is now, have tempted us to say a word or two-but we forbear. It is not necessary. Washington will be the seat of government for many years .- Alexandria

Mr. John S. Barbour, President of the Orange, Alexandria and Manassas, and of the Lynchburg and Danville railroads, has published an address in relation to the last named road, in which he makes an appeal to all th friends of the enterprise, and especially to th people of the counties of Campbell and Pittsylvania, and the city of Lynchburg, to put their shoulders to the wheel, and aid by every means in their power the rapid construction of a work which will do so much to develop the material interests of a highly productive portion of Vir-

The reports received at the Department of Agriculture, since the first of August, indicate a decrease of the orn crop in comparison with the product of 1868. The diminution of the corn crop in some sections is partly made up by an increased product in several States, in. cluding New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware, and the gress increase in the cotton crop will be diminished by a reduction in the product of North Carolina, Tennessee, South Carolina and Alabama.

THE Republican, in its kindly mention of the return of the editor of this paper from the Pacific coast, notes the fact that the return trip from California to Washington was made in the short time of 167 hours. Sacramentoinstead of San Francisco, was, however, the starting place. By another year the trip will be reduced to six days!

The engineer of the Suez canal, M. de Lesseps, made a report on the 2d instant, from which it appears that though the opening of the canal to large vessels will not be consummated until the 17th of November, when there will be a grand celebration, yet for a twelve month past and more, the canal has really been in use for commeacial purposes.

The coal miners in the Scranton region ar reported to have rejected another offer of compromise from the operators, and the prospect for the resumption of labor, which looked bright a few days since, has again been spoiled. The miners say that if they do not go to work they have a fund of $114,000 for their relief.

DANGER OF HALF-COOKED MEAT AND VEGETABLES

It people will persist in eating their food half-cooked, after the disclosures made at the meeting of the American association for the advancement of science at Salem, Massachuset's, the other day, they will show either that they have very little fear of death, or very little faith in the teachings of the sarans. Last Friday, the third day of the session of the association, a discussion took place in reference to the Tricking spiralis, in which some very remarkable and interesting statements were made upon the subject by Professor Agassiz and others. Professor J. Baker Edwards first gave some facts concerning triching, stating, what is generally known, that they are minute worms, which find their way into the system by the means of diseased pork, eaten raw or insufficiently cooked. The female triching, once in the stomach, there propagates immense quantities of worms, which make their way into the muscles and feed upon them, thus usually causing death. Sometimes, however, the worms die, and they then assume a spiral form, and can be examined with a microscope if powerful polarized light is used. If mea. containing trichinæ is heated to 212 degrees, he worms will be killed, and the meat will not injure the consumer, if it be good in other respects. Professor Agassiz followed Professor Edwards. He said that he "hoped the appetite of the community would not be disturbed by this scientific discussion, as such worms are present in all meats and even vegetables, and there is no danger if they be properly cooked." It strikes us that Professor Agassiz, with all his scientific attainments, must be a poor judge of human nature if he thinks such a startling announcement as this is calculated to quiet the nerves and restore the appetites of the community, disturbed by the pork controvers. As long as the trichinae was confined to hogs we could make a safe thing of it by eschewing &c. But now death stares at us from the pot, no matter what we put on for dinner, and the 1868 and 1869 Oxford beat this, rowing over the lovers of beefsteak rare, underdone mutton chops, and roast beef with its juices, stand aghast. They had no sympathy for those who had to abandon their roast pig, ham and sausage, but the matter has now come home to them. It is all very well to say 212 degrees of heat will "do" for the worms, but how are you going to know that every mouthful of food was subjected to that test. Where are your heat measures to apply to the interior of boiled baked or roasted. "God sends meat, and the devil sends cooks," says the old adage, but without going so far, we may say with more Harvards to abandon the light shell they took | truth and less profanity, that people not usually very careful about such matters, and it is often the case that the outside of a piece of meat is thoroughly cooked while the inside has not been heated up to the boiling point of water Should there be trichinae within, they thus would not be killed. Besides it won't do for people on elevated ground to eat boiled meat at all. The boiling point of water lowers as we ascend above the sea level, so that our neighbors' boiled meat down town may be perfectly wholesome, while curs cooked on the heights may be certain death, just because | SUPER PHOSPHATE OF LIME. our water would boil one de ree under the mark. The words of a man so emineut in science as Professor Agassiz, however, are not to be lightly disregarded, and we therefore seriously advise our readers to see to it, that their meat is thoroughly cooked, which may generally be judged by its appearance when

cut. P. S. CHAPPELL,

MANUFACTURING CHEMIST. OFFICE No. 100 LOMBARD STREET.

BALTIMORE. MD.

My Dear Ser.—I am glad to avail myself of an opportunity of expressing to you the very high appreciation which I entertain of your personal character and the rare busines qualifications which you possess for the enterprise in which you are so extensively engaged. I know that I but give expression to the opinion of every one with whom you have been brought in contact, that sterling worth and unquestioned honesty have marked your entire business career. Whilst it is highly creditable to occupy this enviable position in the community, it is particularly so with one engaged in the manufacture of Pertilizers, this critical and peculiar tempting branch of trade, in which the interests of the consumer is entirely dependent upon the unswerving honesty, strict integrity, skill and atmost scrutiny on the part of the manufacturer.

In my capacity as Analytical Chemist I have had BALTIMORE, December 2, 1 the manufacturer.

In my capacity as Analytical Chemist I have had frequent occasions, at the request of parties interested, and without your knowledge, to test these essential points by the examination of your preparations, and it is with extreme pleasure that I here state that the results of my investigations have been without exception satisfactory to the highest degree. The fact that the standard of those Fertilizers manufactured under your supervision at your works is so successfully and favorably established, is a further evidence of your superiority as a manufacturer and chemist, whilst the extent and completeness of your works enables you to guarantee uniformity in their continuous preparation.

Trusting that the above may prove of some service to you, I hope you will not consider it out of place in my referring to those fine and genial traits of heart and character which have rendered my social intercourse with you for many years so extremely pleasant

Believe me yours very truly,

P. S. Chappell, Esq., Baltimore, Md.

MABYLAND AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE.

Prince George's County, Mb., Oct 10, 1868.

Dear Sir:—It affords me very great pleasure to bear testimony to your very superior qualifications as an expert manufacturing chemist, and to your unblemished honesty and integrity as a man My oppertunities for full knowledge as to each of these particulars have been of the most favorable character based as hey have been on an intense acquaintance with you for nearly twenty years, during which time I have had many business and professional relations with you, especially in the manufacture of "fertilizers" in general and also of special manures.

I know that you have availed yourself of all the scientific aid possible at your command, and have left no means untried to perfect yourself in the practice and science of your profession. In my official position it has been my duty frequently to examine the products of your manufacture, and have never found any occasion to doubt your honesty or skill. Whilst manufacturing large quantities of manures for me at different times. I have been satisfied not only of the most scrupulous fair dealing on your part, but also of the streat care and skill which you exercised in their manufacture. With opportunities for knowledge equal if not superior to any one else in the State. I do not hesitate to say that I would rather trust to your combination of skill and integrity than to that of any one who has ever been engaged in the manufacture of manures in this State. I tender this statement as an act of justice to you, and hope that you will make whetever use of it that may best promote your interests. Very truly jours.
